There is no better feeling than turning on an episode of Friends that you've seen a hundred times and laughing as hard as you did the first time.

Friends have viewers of all different ages watching and laughing and are constantly getting more people watching with the show's hype and general humour.

Friends has lived on for over 20 years now because it has attracted viewers from all around the world with its loveable characters and witty writing. People have become emotionally attached with the six friends in this show because of the relationships between them. The hectic relationship between Ross and Rachel and the happy and funny relationship between Monica and Chandler was one reason why people kept and keep on watching.

Each episode is as funny as the last but it's also has some very emotional and real storylines that viewers can relate to and sympathise with which is another reason why we love Friends and the world does too.

But the reason why most people love this show is because it makes you laugh. A lot. There is not one episode of Friends that won't make you laugh at least 10 times. Everyone loves to laugh and Friends has jokes to appeal to people of all different ages.

Friends have been on TV for more than 20 years and we have no doubt that it will be on for another 20 years enchanting new generations.
